Texas A&M AgriLife Extension
Internship Guidelines

Introduction:

Research shows that college students involved in meaningful internship opportunities with Extension significantly increases the chance that they will stay in that career field after graduation. An Extension internship provides a valuable learning experience for both the intern and the agent. For the student, the internship provides a setting where they can implement the philosophy and teaching methods of non-formal education as it becomes a lesson in "real-world-learning"; for many agents, supervising an intern serves as a refresher course in the theories and principles of non-formal education as well as an opportunity to update their own knowledge and skills.

A meaningful internship...

- ❖ Offers relevant experience in the student's chosen field. An internship should prepare students for a position in a particular field. Students may perform some routine or clerical duties, but their responsibilities must be largely career-related. For example, if an Extension office has a position that involves nothing more than answering the phone, making copies, filing and running errands, it does not qualify as a meaningful internship. But if students are also provided projects that involve developing educational materials, assisting with field days, camps, programs and developing educational newsletters under the supervision of the sponsoring Agents, then it becomes a learning experience related to County Extension work, and would qualify as an internship.
- ❖ Encourages the intern to initiate projects, ask questions, absorb information, and provide feedback as part of their learning experience.
- ❖ Create an internship job description that is structured to simulate an actual job. The position should include a substantial but appropriate level of responsibility with duties and requirements clearly stated and agreed upon.
- ❖ Assigns an employee-mentor to the intern. Rather than just handing the student a list of things to do, structure the experience so the student interacts on a regular basis with someone who has experience in the student's intended field (Agriculture and Natural Resources, Family and Consumer Science or 4-H and Youth Development ). This interaction should include instruction, guidance, and advice. In addition, if the student receives academic credit, some academic departments may have specific learning objectives or other criteria that must be met.
- ❖ Considers assigning a project as a part of the internship experience. Assist the intern with identifying a real-world problem that impacts County Extension work, and then allow the intern time to conduct research and develop an action plan and propose solutions to address an issue. At the end of the internship, have the intern make a formal presentation to County Extension Faculty and District Extension Administrators/County

Extension Directors, selected Specialists, Regional Program Director and others who may be interested in the findings.

- ❖ Involves the intern in meetings, committee meetings and other gatherings to help the intern feel comfortable in the work environment and a part of the team. As appropriate, invite the intern to internal (District Trainings or Meetings) and external meetings.
- ❖ Introduces the intern to your Extension contacts. Help the intern begin to gain access to individuals who can help the intern learn and grow, as well as to build the intern's professional network.
